TEN MOST IMPORTANT PUBLICATIONS

1. Chapman S. Public Health Advocacy and Tobacco Control: Making Smoking History. Oxford: Blackwell, 2007. ISBN 9781405161633 [Citations:81]

1a: Japanese translation (2009) by Eiji Yano. Tokyo: Shino Harashinsha Co ISBN978-4-88412-332-1 (<http://www.shinoharashinsha.co.jp/Books2.aspx?PID=222&PNO=1>)

Comment: 155,000 words in two parts. The first analyses the most important tasks facing global tobacco control in the 21st Century. The second is an A-Z practical guide to tobacco control strategy.

Reviews: "Throughout his career, Simon Chapman has viewed the field of tobacco control from 30,000 feet with some of the most penetrating insights academicians have to offer. Yet he's also battled in the trenches, leading the troops in creative and intelligent assaults on a true Goliath of an enemy. A voracious consumer of everything Chapman authors, I was fascinated, educated, and occasionally entertained by this broad and deep "manual" of how to do tobacco control in the 21st century."

Kenneth E. Warner, Dean and Avedis Donabedian Distinguished University Professor School of Public Health, University of Michigan

"Simon Chapman's analysis provides the road map of what needs to be done, how it needs to be done and that it needs to be done with a sense of urgency. It is a required reading for all those who want to make a difference in the lives of many, especially our children."

Jeffrey Wigand, MA, Ph.D., MAT, Sc.D. aka "The Insider"

British Medical Journal October 2007

"He takes up some of the hottest issues in contemporary tobacco control worldwide and shows us their ethical, political, and policy complexities. Chapman's chapter on harm reduction and product regulation is one of the most nuanced pieces I've ever read on this contentious topic, which threatens to seriously divide the tobacco control movement.

Situating the issue within the history of industry product engineering, he reminds readers of the "lights" debacle, from which tobacco control advocates still have much to learn. The tobacco industry developed so called light cigarettes that delivered less tar and nicotine, as measured by machine. However, it was determined only much later (after millions of smokers switched to lights, thinking they would be safer) that lights were no safer at all, because people covered the specially engineered ventilation holes that allowed the lower levels measured by machine, and they "compensated" by smoking more and more deeply—facts that the industry knew all along. Given the recent interest by major multinational companies in acquiring manufacturers of smokeless tobacco products, Chapman argues for a strong regulatory regime. Under such a regime the amounts of specific, known harmful constituents in all tobacco products would be reduced and product distribution would be curtailed, but he warns that such tinkering should not divert tobacco control from its primary focus.

Chapman's book is serious scholarship, but don't mistake it for some spiritless tome that only academics will want to slog through. Anyone remotely interested in public health advocacy, ethics, and policy—not only related to tobacco—will find it a rewarding read. Chapman blends history, policy, ethics, and advocacy in a witty, engaging, and accessible way. Discussing Australia's laws on smoke-free areas, for example, he observes: "For a time in Australia, you could not smoke within two metres of a bar, this being deemed sensible to protect bar staff from harm. But at 2.01 metres, the idea was that they can breathe easy. There was the small problem that everyone forgot to tell the smoke it had to keep back. Anyone with an IQ a point higher than it takes to grunt understood that something was very wrong here."

Chapman sees informed advocacy as part and parcel of public health, and the second half of the book is an A to Z of advocacy, focusing on tobacco but packed with useful gems for advocates in any area of health and drawn from his own long experience with advocacy at many levels. Perhaps it's not quite the Sistine Chapel ceiling, but Chapman—who began his artistic career as an advocate defacing cigarette billboards with witty counter-phrases—knows how to think strategically about the best ways to move from symbolic gestures to genuine policy change. This book should stimulate many productive actions towards ending the holocaust."

2. Chapman S, Lupton D. The Fight for Public Health: Principles and Practice of Media Advocacy. London: British Medical Journal Books, 1994. 260pp ISBN 0-7279-0849-9. [Citations:199]

Comment: When published, one of only two international texts on public health advocacy. Named four years later by a writer in the Lancet as one of two books that should be read by anyone wanting to communicate more effectively with the press. (Lancet 1998;351:1596)

"We would send out a book list, of two books. The first [would be] Strunk and White's The Elements of Style. The second would be The Fight for Public Health. This under used book ... shows how a little understanding of media processes becomes a powerful tool for public health – from article in Lancet 1998;351:1596 on how doctors can better communicate with the public.

3. Chapman S. Over our dead bodies: Port Arthur and the fight for gun law reform. Sydney: Pluto, 1998. 218pp. ISBN 1 86403 037 2 [Citations:14]

Comment: Detailed analysis of the advocacy process that preceded and followed the 1996 Port Arthur massacre, leading to radical changes in Australia's gun laws.

"The publication of this book confirms Simon Chapman's place as Australia's pre-eminent public health lobbyist and has lessons for every country in the world ..." Review in: Aust NZ J Public Health 1999;23:110.
"... a model to some of us in the criminal justice field of how to move beyond research and scholarship, into advocacy for change." Review in: Current Issues in Criminal Justice 1999;10:330-3.
"He lays bare the bones of advocacy on both sides of the gun control debate and shows that understanding the opposition and getting the facts right are key to any public health change. If he ever wants a new career he could star as a general; until then I am glad he is wearing the white hat." Review in BMJ 1999;319:1999.
"This book is not just a good read but also an armoury for peace lovers who want easy access to plenty of weapons with which to knock down the arguments of the gun-loving minority." Review in Australian Dr 1999;18 Mar:89

4. Freeman B, Chapman S, Rimmer M. Review: The case for plain packaging of tobacco products. Addiction 2008; 103:580-590. [Citations:61]

immunisation, Australia 1993-97. Aust NZ J Public Health 1998;22:17-26. [Citations:75]

Comment: The first international study of the way the anti-immunisation lobby argues its case in the media. The study so aggravated the anti-immunisation lobby that it has set up a website challenging me to “be injected with all baby vaccines adjusted to my body weight by a doctor of their choice and in their presence”. 10,000 copies of the paper were distributed to GPs by CSL Ltd.

8. Chapman S. Unravelling gossamer with boxing gloves: problems in explaining the decline in smoking. BMJ 1993;307:429-32. [Citations:79]
